Debt Resolution Summary Sheet

Current status:

- Currently have $921,345,000 in variable rate debt with swaps to convert to a fixed rate.
- Why this structure rather than fixed rate debt – received lower net interest rates reducing annual debt service expense approximately $7 million.
- This worked very well until the markets recently froze and some banks developed financial difficulties.
- The liquidity provider on $511,850,000 of our variable rate debt is Dexia and they were downgraded from AA to A+. There is now very little market for this debt and any remaining market is requiring an interest rate of at least 3% higher.
- To the extent our debt can not be marketed, Dexia is required to pay the bond holder and take our debt. However, generally higher interest rates apply once Dexia holds our debt. In addition, Dexia is the liquidity provider for many debt issuers and they may not be able to take everyone's debt.

Alternative solutions:

- Replace Dexia as the liquidity provider – because of the current market conditions, it is very unlikely that we will be able find anyone willing to replace Dexia and it would be very expensive.
- Issue long term fixed rate debt to repay the $511,850,000 of debt with Dexia as the liquidity provider. It will take up to three months to be able to issue long term debt and it may be difficult to sell a debt issue this large. We should start the process so that this is an option this winter.
- Convert the variable rate debt to a one year note to repay the $511,850,000 with a fixed interest rate. Current indications are that there is a market for this type of debt and it can be sold with a 3% - 4% interest rate which is less than our current overall debt interest rate.

Additional information:

All of this debt has a related swap. At this time, it would cost over $20 million to cancel these swaps. By converting the current debt to a one year note, we do not have to cancel the swaps. Our intent will be to cancel the swaps as it is determined to be most economical. We believe it is likely that the swaps values will increase as the market stabilizes and then we can cancel the swaps at much more economical levels.
